A TALE OF TWO TOYS by John Cosper

Kate, Jeff, and Erin enter.

KATE: This is Jeff, and this is Erin.

JEFF: Hello.

ERIN: Hi.

KATE: When Jeff and Erin were eight, they both received their favorite Christmas gift ever. Jeff got a Soldier Dan action figure!

Dan enters.

JEFF: All right! Awesome!

KATE: Erin received Jesus as her Savior.

Jesus enters.

ERIN: I love you, Jesus!

KATE: Jeff had endless fun playing war with Soldier Dan, while Erin spent many hours reading the Bible, praying, and getting to know her Jesus.

ERIN: We're like this! (Erin crosses her fingers.)

JEFF: Soldier Dan and I are like that too, right?

Dan doesn't answer.

JEFF: If he could talk, he'd say yes.

KATE: When Erin was eleven, Jesus helped Erin make the transition to middle school.

ERIN: It was tough, but Jesus got me through it.

KATE: Soldier Dan made the transition, too. He moved from the toy shelf to the closet.

JEFF: Sorry, Dan. My friends are coming over, and they don't play with toys any more.

KATE: When Erin was eighteen, Jesus helped Erin go from high school to college.

ERIN: He helped me figure out who I'm supposed to be and how he wants me to serve others.

KATE: Jeff went to college, too, while Soldier Dan went to the basement.

JEFF: Is that where he went? I was wondering.
