DISBELIEF by John Cospers

The scene takes place in the home of one of the members of the Jewish ruling council. ESTHER is drying some dishes as MARTHA enters. ESTHER pauses and looks up, then resumes drying.

ESTHER: Some storm out there.

MARTHA: Yes, it was.

ESTHER: Is he still out there?

MARTHA: No. He died right before the storm hit.

ESTHER: Ah.

MARTHA: It was bizarre, Esther. He cried out, his head fell, and he was gone. One of the soldiers pierced his side to be sure, and the next thing we knew, there was the storm and an earthquake.

ESTHER: Interesting.

MARTHA: I heard one of the soldiers right after saying, "Surely this man was the son of a God." It really made me wonder if the stories aren't true.

There is a pause, as ESTHER doesn't reply.

MARTHA: But then...if he was the son of God, why would he allow mere men to kill him like that?

ESTHER: Exactly my thought.

MARTHA: Listen to you. Just like the rest of the mob that was crying for his death today. You believed in him once.

ESTHER: I... I didn't know what to believe.

MARTHA: You saw him perform miracles. He healed the crippled, the blind—even raised the dead.

ESTHER: So we heard.

MARTHA: We witnessed him healing the blind and lame with our own eyes, did we not?

ESTHER: Maybe so. But that does not make him the son of God.

MARTHA: Esther, you were the one who first believed. You convinced me that it might be possible. Why is it so hard to believe now?
